The most common question I'm asked when I visit with Taylor alums is, "How has Taylor changed and is it still the kind of place it was when we were there?" My answer is, that from a physical viewpoint the place has grown beyond recognition. From my years all that remains of the old days are Rediger Auditorium (the old Shreiner Auditorium), Swallow Robin, now completely remodeled, the "new" dining room (now the dome/student center) and the "new" Ayres Memorial Library (now the home of the art department). Everything else is new since my days. Alumni are always amazed at the changes.

I then tell them that spiritually and academically things remain much the same. The curriculum has grown, and there are more students and faculty, but Taylor still takes academics very seriously. The students are not like us in that we were mostly first generation college students and this world has changed economically and socially (continued on page 5).

Memories. What makes a memory? What makes it last? What makes it fade with time? Our life is filled with memories. Some good and some bad. Some that we hold on to with all our might, and some that we try to forget. Funny how the ones we try to forget, plague us for what seems like an eternity. However, the ones we want to remember, leave us all too quickly. The last hundred years are full of memories-some ours and some belonging to the generations before us. But down through the ages, people's motives, attitudes and experiences have remained the same. We have a link to the past, for they had the same basic problems we face today. Wars, technology, love, peer pressure, families - nothing has changed! (continued on page 4)

What they really want to know is, "Are the students still committed to Christ in a serious way?" My answer is one of the happiest ones I ever give, and that is, "Today's student body, as a whole, is at least as spiritual as we were and I feel more mature in their desire to save the world for Christ." They are usually amazed because they assume that everything has drifted away from God over the years. It is a great source of joy for me to assure them that Taylor students are worthy of their trust, prayers and support.

The past was great, the present is better, but I pray the future will be even better as we stick to our core values and daily commit ourselves to follow Christ faithfully.

Looking back is fun, but I wouldn't go back for anything, mainly because I am so pleased to be part of your present experiences and what God is doing among students today.

Things do change though, and people change. This year has been a year of change and a year of growth. The last hundred years have been years of change and years of growth. Through all the tears, the laughter, the trials, the joys, the sorrows, and the changes, one thing has remained the same. One fact has remained true through the last century and through all of history. The single fact that no matter what may happen or what life may throw our way, Jesus, our Saviour, our Abba and our God is next to us. He is leading us and guiding us. He makes us roads in the wilderness and rivers in the desert. Not only will He continue to, but He has been doing it through all of history. Through all of the changes and the memories, He alone remains constant and He alone is the unfading, never-ending memory.

This book is lovingly Dedicated to the memory of

Jan Hagar

Jan was a woman of great compassion. She seemed to have a limitless capacity to care.

I remember when we hired Betsy, and Jan came into my office with the most delightful smile, just to tell me what a good decision she thought we made. Or the time Amy came to visit and I watched as she introduced her around the office with what I can only describe as childlike joy. And as we met on Tuesday mornings and Jan would share the ways God was using Carrie at camp and school, and tears of joy would join that beautiful smile.

Jan taught us that strength is not a physical thing nor is it the ability to remain emotionally unaffected by our trials or difficulties. . . that true strength is in facing the challenges and trials that each day brings with a fresh resolve and a determination to move forward regardless of your feelings.

Although in my heart I don't understand why God allowed the race to end so soon for Jan, she finished the race at full stride. She completed the task.

I know that Jan is full of joy right now. She is enjoying fellowship with her Savior. I bet her nails are even painted in some heavenly color. Today this woman of compassion is experiencing firsthand God's compassion, this woman of great calm is in the presence of the Prince of Peace. I have a sneaking suspicion that right now she is doing what she loved best. She is gathering the host of Heaven and instead of showing pictures she is looking down, pointing out her girls, and smiling proudly.

Rick Seaman

One of the greatest compliments a person can receive was at the core of who Rick Seaman was. He had the unique ability to make everyone he came in contact with feel as if he or she was the most important person alive.

Rick was the essence of what it means to be a Christian. He lived his life with a passion that was evident to everyone around him and his personality was magnetic. He was a devoted family man who constantly spoke of his love for his family and especially for his wife, Joanne. He characterized what it means to be a "godly man." He could be strong and bold, yet cry with another who was hurting. He would be tough in the classroom, and still take class time to tell a humorous story. He was successful in finance, but still knew what his priorities were.

There is much that we can learn from the life of this great man. He taught about business, but his students learned about life. Everyone with whom we come in contact has an impact upon our lives -- some great and some small. Rick Seaman was one of the few who managed to have an incredible impact on almost everyone with whom he came in contact.

Thank you, Rick, for what you gave each and every one of us.

Reflections of a Sophomore Welcome Weekend

It was that time of year again. The time when freshmen left their homes to become a part of the class of 2002. For some, it was a time of sorrow, departing from their families. However, for many it was a huge relief. College is a new chapter in each person's life and everyone has to turn that page. With it comes many fears and anxieties. The purpose of Welcome Weekend is to help lessen the pain of adjusting.

It had only been a year since I was an entering freshman, playing get-to-know-you games in the gym and smiling shyly at that girl. Now here I stood, waiting to welcome the freshmen as a designated mentor: a PROBE leader.

The weekend was filled with countless games, a hearty square dance and PROBE meetings. Once the returning students all arrived, everything seemed to be in place. An ice cream social ended the weekend and marked the beginning of many life-long friendships.

Then came the last chance for Mom to make your bed, Dad to offer up some advice, and little sister to hang on your leg. It was time for everyone to go and leave you in the clutches of your roommate, PAs and PROBE leader.

I remember it like it was yesterday. And now standing here a year later I am thankful that I have survived two Welcome Weekends and that I am a Taylor student.

"Bring every bit of warm clothing you own and come along on the Wengatz-Olson campout!", read an invitation sent to the dorm-dwellers of 1975. There was a mad dash for the limited supply of sleeping bags on campus, transportation to the campgrounds deep in the Indiana wilderness, a wild game of guys versus gals Penguin Football (whatever that is!?!), and burnt hotdogs around the campfire. Pictured here, groovy Wengatz resident Woody Winslow lays back and relaxes. (Fun fact: SAC was still called "The Student Union" in 1975, and there were six students with the last name "Taylor" in the student body.)

This autumn's speaker was Rick Hawks. He addressed issues such as Taylor students and having Godly relationships.

Geological Spiritual Renewal Weeks

Each semester, Taylor has a week set aside to focus on Spiritual Emphasis and Renewal. This year's guest speakers for Spiritual Renewal Weeks were Rick Hawks and Janice Crouse. Each spoke in chapel several times and at special evening services. Both spoke on gender and relational-related topics.

Rick Hawks came to us from The Chapel, a new church in Fort Wayne of which he is the pastor and founder. A Taylor graduate, he went on to pastor Blackhawk Baptist Church, also in Fort Wayne. He spoke on God's call for our relationships and challenged us to take a more mature approach to being men and women of God. He spoke on controlling our desires and molding them to the will of the Lord.

Janice Crouse came to us as the founder of Ecumenical Coalition on Women and Society, a conservative group that calls for a Biblical approach to women's rights. She is the author of the Christian Women's Declaration and former associate vice-president for academic affairs at Taylor. She is on the board of trustees at Asbury College and is a member of the Stanley Distinguished Scholar Lecture Series. She stressed an attitude of love, forgiveness and humility as she addressed sensitive gender issues.

Both speakers challenged us to be concious and receptive to the will of the Lord as we live out our faith in relationships with those around us.

While today's Taylor campus is praying for revival and going to such things as Spiritual Renewal Week and men's and women's conferences, the Taylor campus of yesterday approached the spiritual side of education a different way. Pictured here is a segment of the 1949 Holiness League. The League appears to have continued throughout many of Taylor's younger years and to have been widely participated in most of those years.

Parents Weekend/Grandparents Day

I don't know of many (if any) other campuses that hold either Parents Weekend or Grandparents Day, but I can't think of any events that I appreciate more. And not just because I enjoy showing my family the laundry room I use, that I make my bed and drink a glass of milk daily in the DC, but because it also makes my family happy to be able to come and visit me in my home-away-from-home. Not every Taylor student is in the same situation as I, but I originate from a town only about three hours away. For a close-knit immediate and extended family, this can be ideal. I get to taste life outside the nest, but grandma can make the venture to deliver a kiss, have a meal with me at Fazoli's, and drop off Easter candy that I missed while traveling to Minnesota. Both these events have become important and characteristic of the Taylor community of the 90's, and are in accordance with the values of the community. Our parents and grandparents are a wonderful thing to lift up and celebrate, and it a wonderful thing to show them respect and send it shining into the myriad of secular campuses around us. This year, Parents and Grandparents days went well and were well-attended. I hope that the future Taylor will take advantage of this opportunity in a broken world. -Devon Marie

Airband, 80s & Nostalgia Nights

I remember the first time that an upperclassman looked down into my eager, large, hazel eyes and said "You better get there early, because people will be there early and they'll knock you down trying to get a good seat." I thought to myself, "It can't be that bad," shrugging it off with the cool demeanor I had perfected in highschool. So when I looked down from the balcony on my first-ever Airband night, (I was a participant) I was shocked to see the doors open to the sound of hundreds of mumbling voices, and then to see a literal stampede of faces that I had come to know, flood into the auditorium; some students jumping over seats to get to the front rows. Airband, 80s Night and Nostalgia Night are three of the Taylor "Nights" that I most look forward to. We come together to have fun and to watch both the talents and the occasional tom-foolery of our peers and friends. With music thumping and lights strobing, we are immersed in a multi-media-Taylor-spectacular. We get a break from our studies and a good show, which explains why the "Nights" are among the highest attended Taylor traditions. Now when I'm rattin' my hair a couple hours before "Taylor time" hits, I use the wisdom gained by experience and turn to that poor frosh who is just now pulling on a pair of bellbottoms and say with a smirk "You better get there early, because people will be there early and they'll knock you down trying to get a good seat." -Devon

Homecoming

Homecoming: One of the busiest weekends of the year and one of the best! Plans for the big weekend began long before the month of October. A homecoming cabinet, made up of 20 sub committees involving 60 students, was led by Alumni Director Marty Songer. These students were hard at work throughout the fall, setting up the 5K fun run, creating the backdrop in Rediger Auditorium, and even blowing up purple and gold balloons at six o'clock on Saturday morning.

The sound of the Taylor Jazz Band filled the chapel Friday morning and President Kesler gave his remarks. The Taylor family reunited: old friends with familiar faces graced the campus as past memories were rediscovered and new ones were created. Seniors Ryan Delp and Jennifer Hartzler were crowned King and Queen and the Trojans brought home a TU football victory!

We gladly celebrate Taylor University, which has been built upon the solid foundation of Christ's love; and has been nurturing students lives in the past and will continue to do so for years to come.

Getting Involved Student Activities Committee

After a cold winter's blow in one of Taylor's worst snow storms yet (in our opinion), spring was welcomed once again with open arms. The campus came alive with weekly ultimate Frisbee and angle ball games and SAC jumped forward also with enthusiastic energy to begin another semester.

Implemented for only the second time in TU history, SAC hosted an outdoor campus-wide prayer and praise, as well as a Saturday morning trip to the inner-city of Muncie, to offer food and prayer to the poor. Both events were attended with a crowd that eagerly anticipated these ministry opportunities. The concerts booked gave outstanding performances with top artists like Supertones, Ragamuffins, and Jennifer Knapp. Encountering another holiday of Easter, SAC's endeavor to add a new twist paid off with great reward from the student body. With brightly colored plastic eggs hidden all over campus, students took to finding the eggs, each of which contained a prize. The top prize, a $100 bill, was found by seniors Becky Niffin and Joya Landin, used it for gas money over spring break.

As spring came into full bloom, the year wound down to the humid days of summer. The fresh air brought out mountain bikers and the die-hard anglers. SAC responded to the hunger for more outdoor activities by hosting the annual Barney's Bike Race and Bass tourney. Finishing the year with a loud and enthusiastic bang, the end-of-the-year study break brought a majority of the student body together for one last hurrah.

SAC hopes that TU was encouraged and challenged throughout the activities this year. We believe that through our efforts to enjoy the fellowship of one another, the Lord was lifted and honored by TU students. -Jon Summer and Libby Crawford.

Chapel

Three times a week, Taylor students look forward to joining together in chapel for a time of worship and fellowship in order to stimulate intellectual and spiritual growth. This year, students were challenged to "seek the face of the Lord together" to promote unity within the student body. Through my own experience in working with chapel services, I have witnessed students' desire to see something more, to be real with one another.

Students, faculty and speakers demonstrated transparency and vulnerability through testimonies. Confessions were made during Relational Enrichment Week and hearts were revealed through praise and worship. It was evident, as I was humbled, that God surpassed my expectations for chapels and moved within my own heart through speakers, testimonies and special music. More importantly, I could feel the anticipation of those around me that knew God desires to move on Taylor campus: "If My people, who are called by My name, will humble themselves and pray and seek My face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven and will forgive them their sin and will heal their land." (2 Chron. 7:14)

Concerts

The Student Activities Committee provided students with a wide spectrum of Christian music for their 1998-1999 concert schedule. Beginning on Homecoming Weekend, the concert series placed Michael Card first on the roster. With elements more like that of a worship service, Card's concert was one of deep emotion and praise to God. His remarkable songwriting and singing, as well as the gifted playing of a variety of instruments, made this concert appealing to both the physical and spiritual senses.

With a similar heat and devotion to God, The Orange County Supertones presented their musical styling of ska. Full of energy and intensity, the Supertones were able to have the crowd moshing in the front row of Rediger Auditorium in one minute, and lifting their hands in solemn worship to God in the next. Powerful musical chords, meaningful lyrics, and a commanding on-stage presence made this an unforgettable concert.

The rest of the year continued in supreme entertainment, as SAC scheduled the Ragamuffin Band (the band that previously played with the late Rich Mullins), Jennifer Knapp, and Plumb. These three artists were popular around campus and continued the agenda of both good music, performances and hearts that are dedicated to God.

In 1976, it was still difficult to find and schedule Christian performers, but Taylor University had managed instead to schedule such acts as Olivia Newton John. Pictured here are two performances from the 1975-1976 year (anonymous in the 1976 year-book).

This year, the 17 members of ICC (Inter-Class Council) were under the reign of their fearless queen, Lori Bedi, who would be taking the last victory lap around the ICC circuit. Under her guidance, they made many steps toward improving class unity. These improvements have been added on top of the required duties of ICC. Some of the regular historic events that ICC puts on every year are Airband, Christmas with Jay, and Taylathon. Airband had one of the best turnouts ever, making it all the more historic, and the members of ICC really worked hard to make all of these events fun, fun, fun for everyone!

This year, ICC decided that they wanted to step up the duties that were required of them. The class officers began to brainstorm events that could bring more class unity. Some of these events were prayer and praises, community outreaches, newsletters and class T-shirts.

Another important activity that ICC has been working on this year is the Community Discipleship Groups. Groups are intended for students to come together from all across campus to help build each other through Christ. Good ideas this year deserve a star, and thanks to Lori for blazing the trail! It has been a good year for all.

Savior The Christmas Season

Christmas time at Taylor has many special activities associated with it. The formal pick-a-dates, Christmas with Jay (and Janie), and the perennial favorite Christmas Banquet. Walt reciting "The Night Before Finals" is something that was funny as a frosh and has gained meaning as time passes. The children at Christmas with Jay, for whom the stories are ostensibly told, are always sources of amusement and joy. It is also easy to remember the difficulties that we face during the Christmas season. Finals week is right before break and makes everyone anxious for a chance to relax, unwind and recover from "crunch time." And yet, at Taylor, Christmas means more than just this. The advent chapels hold special meaning to me because of what they symbolize. Through them we are reminded that Christmas is about so much more than Christmas Day; we prepare our hearts for the birth of our Lord.

"I enjoy the fact that the students look forward to this every year. I love tradition and anything that speaks of that and has a family feel."

The Holy Land

World Travels- Semester

Incredible. Amazing. Unforgettable. Ask any of the 17 Taylor students that spent the fall 1998 semester in Israel about their overseas experiences, and these are some likely responses. The group studied at Jerusalem University College and made Israel their "home" throughout their four-month stay. School life, as experienced by these students in Jerusalem, differed greatly from previous experiences at Taylor. The "Tomb Room" and the "Cable Room" replaced Wengatz and English. An on-campus "family" of 60 students made Taylor's community of some 1800 seem enormous. The Israel campus was located just outside the Old City walls of Jerusalem. To say that the experience was merely educational would be an understatement, and to reduce the experience to a one-word description is impossible. The Taylor Students at JUC learned academically by travelling frequently and visiting numerous Biblical sites in Israel. They studied Bible, the land and the culture of its people. God moved among them and they each grew spiritually while living in the land where Jesus walked. Group members were strengthened physically as they walked through the Old and New City of Jerusalem and hiked through the land surrounding it. Also, they were stretched relationally as they met Muslim, Jew, and Christian alike. What had once been a strange and foreign land to 17 Taylor students was transformed into a familiar place full of sentiment and sweet memories. Regardless of whether it is now a shopkeeper named Solomon, or the Jewess librarian named Marie that occasionally cross the minds of these students, they each hold one thing in common: they experienced the Holy Land and are forever changed. -Anne Konkler

In 1992, Taylor implemented an exchange program to Russia's Nizhni Novgorod University. Twelve Taylor students and three faculty went to Moscow after eight students and three faculty from Russia visited Taylor for a month. Here, the TU contingent looks over the Volga.

From religion to politics to history to nature to culture, Israel spouts diversity and demands intrigue. As the Motherland of Christianity, it has long been the destination and temporary home of many a Taylor student.

My first cross-cultural experience was being a member of the Bahamas Lighthouse team. For one month I was challenged in unbelievable ways, met incredible people and saw may new sights, including the ocean. The focus of our trip was evangelism through performances in elementary and high schools in Abaco and Nassau. Daily, we would sing about Christ, perform skits, and Roger Rayburn would always share his "Bible Coloring Book" with the children. Unfortunately, we lost one member of our team halfway through the trip. Tiffany Sutton had to return to the United States because of health reasons. This was a difficult experience, yet it truly bonded the entire group. It helped us to evaluate where our focus was and to remain strong as brothers and sisters in Christ, throughout the trip.

In 1986, the trips included Inter-term in California, Spring Break in Florida, and the mother-of-all-bike-trips; a 10 month "Circle America", starting in Georgia in February, following the perimeters of the U.S. and back to Georgia in November. Wandering Wheels was a way to stretch yourself physically and to enjoy the fellowship of brothers and sisters in Christ while seeing "the world".

The Butler Did It, Into the Woods and The Last Night of Ballyhoo! I have been a part of all three shows in some fashion. My experience being a student volunteer of the Taylor theatrical program has been one of hard work, late hours into the night, continuous trips to Muncie or Marion for props, ransacking the costume room. But it has also been an experience of excitement and an enthusiasm to learn more about theatre. Over the past 30 years, Taylor University's theatre department has had tremendous success in putting together shows that have not only been entertaining, but educational as well. The 1998-1999 theatre season featured three terrific shows that exhibited the talents of its students and the hard work of its volunteers behind the scenes. As the millenium approaches, new students will be entering into the role of Taylor thespian and will shine both on stage and behind the curtains. As for me, I will graduate having been a part of nine different productions and have enjoyed them all!

Youth Conference

Youth Conference is an exciting time of year for the youth and Taylor students who have been planning and anticipating the arrival of the highschoolers. As someone involved in Youth Conference, housing girls and being a Discussion Group Leader, I know the energy and excitement that is associated with the weekend. From the moment that they step foot into Rediger Auditorium to search for the two wacky leaders that are waving around the number that they are told to look for, to the crazy nights spent with the Campus Safety and Morality Patrol chasing down culprits, Taylor becomes a place for college students to reach out and become mentors. Youth Conference brings a little bit of the world to Taylor and allows us all the opportunity to eat a meal with the highschooler who was sent to the conference alone, or to have a talk with the boy who's going through some difficult times. And there's always ample opportunity to have a good laugh with the youth. This year there was a Double Dare Night in the Odle Gymnasium and a concert on Saturday night. For all participating, it was one very exciting and exhausting weekend.

Another Senior Victory! Taylathon

It was a spectacular spring day, reminiscent of summer, with it's sunshine and sunglasses and students gathered around the track for the race of the year... Taylathon. The week of grueling practices, was culminating to this event, with a 5-day game of Stick'em, a cool evening outside the DC cheering on contenders in the "Gettin' Jiggly With It" Jello-Wrestling, and a Friday night campus-wide bar-b-que featuring the prestigious Ben Winters Quartet. Many Taylorites were now seated along the sidelines of what usually constitutes the walkway to the Reade Center, in bleachers, on couches, on blankets and in the grass... anywhere for a good seat. There was a faint smell of cook-out and sweaty bodies in the air. I have to admit, despite only being a sophomore, I was cheering for the Seniors. Either at their feet, snapping photos as they finished off their transition (and almost being pummeled by a runaway bike), or cheering them on in the backstretch as they streamed by in bright yellow, I knew that the seniors were doing a great job and everything was running smoothly for them. When you have a team of men that have been doing this crazy thing we call Taylathon for four years, you can expect excellence. And that is what the senior team exhibited... excellence, right down to the new member of the team, first-year-rider Bobby Whisman. Congratulations to the Bike and Trike team for their victories! -Devon Marie Trevarrow

Graduation

I suppose that a graduating senior should be writing this copy, reflecting on the class, their years at Taylor, and on the graduation ceremonies. But here I sit, on a long night after the graduates have mostly gone on to their new lives, tapping away at a computer as a sophomore-recently-turned-junior. And I have some things to say. On behalf of those still here at Taylor for the next couple of years; thank you to those seniors that were our friends, that were our peers, and that were our role models. We appreciate what you have done for us. I happened to be lucky enough to be invited to accompany nine wonderful senior women on a camping trip a couple of weeks ago, and as the only underclassman there, was able to listen to the moments when they reflected on their Taylor experience and on life beyond it. It was so special to listen to the stories they told, and to be able to hear of the fun they had, the growing they did and the tears they cried. In the light of that campfire I saw the faces of those who go before us and the faces of those that I love, and even the faces of those I want to become. Taylor has been blessed by some wonderful graduates this year, and their prayers and wishes go with you, students, as ours go with them.

-Devon Marie Trevarrow

Solar Car

A race against time....

During the height of the summer solstice, from June 20-29, 40 solar racing cars will make a 1,300-mile trip across state highways and city roads from Washington D.C. to Orlando, FL. Major schools such as Ohio State, Texas A&M, MIT and Yale will participate in this well-publicized event run solely on energy from the sun. Taylor University intends to be among them.

The solar racing team started as a vision by student Jon Clarke back in 1996. The goals: construct a technologically-advanced solar racing vehicle, compete in SunRayce, and represent Jesus Christ in the race to the world. This year, that vision has not died, but increased its momentum. Under the guidance of Dr. Henry Voss, a new generation of students have worked long hours to construct Gideon's Torch in anticipation of SunRayce '99.

While these efforts are centered in Taylor's Physics Department, a wide variety of majors and students are involved with the team. The 40+ students who have worked anywhere from several to hundreds of hours on this project have made SunRayce a Taylor community event.

This team has a strong desire to use SunRayce as a witness to God's glory, hence the name Gideon's Torch was chosen to represent the 'weak made strong' through God's power. God has led the entire process and opened many doors which were once closed.

The experience from this event has been enormous. "People are willing to learn and teach. They take time to say 'this is how it works' and allow input, making it a true group learning experience," stated Heather Lorimar. The Solar Racing Team has already changed lives. The team looks forward to continuing the work of God this summer and in summers to come.

Literary London. A little bit of culture.

Thirty students for one month in London can be an all-around exciting adventure, which it proved to be this year as these students, along with Professor Beulah Baker and Rick Hill traveled across the globe. The goal and final destination was London, England, however, many stops were made along the way. With opportunities to visit places such as Oxford, Cambridge, Stonehenge and Scotland, these students had quite a taste of the diversity of culture that spreads across our world.

Visiting Charles Dickens, C.S. Lewis, and Samuel Johnson's homes, students were able to actually see the places they have been studying about for so long. Opportunities were also provided to visit some of the great attractions of Europe, such as, the Westminster Abbey, Buckingham Palace and St. Paul's Cathedral. The trip was one that could not be matched and will never be forgotten.

Taylor Ringers. A tale of the tour.

The Lord uses many different tools to work in the lives of His children. This year He used handbells to unite 14 people and strengthen them spiritually. The climax of this bonding/growing experience was our tour. Months of hard work paid off in seven days of traveling and performing as the Taylor Ringers went to Colorado and back, playing in various churches along the way. Twenty-seven hundred miles, seven performances, one van, two malls, lots of crocheting, endless inside jokes. It was a blast.

Each morning before jumping in the famous blue van for another long day, the group would gather for a time of prayer and devotions. Members of the group volunteered to lead these meetings, which proved to be some of the most valuable moments of the trip. With each stop the music got better, the friendships grew deeper, the inside jokes grew cheesier, the van grew messier and the crocheted blankets grew bigger. Praise the Lord for an incredible tour.

All Kinds of Happy. A thirst for true happiness.

What is "All Kinds of Happy," and how do I get some? This spring's TV production class worked diligently to create Upland's newest television sensation. Enthusiastic students worked side-by-side with Dr. Tim Kirkpatrick and Joylane Bartron to schedule interesting guests and aspiring musical talents. Taylor had not attempted to produce anything quite like this one-of-a-kind show. The effort was exhausting at times, but proved to be worthwhile. As students tuned in to watch "All Kinds of Happy," a Letterman-style talk show starring sophomore host Josh Olson. With his natural humor and on-screen talent, Josh stole the show. The simple lesson to be learned: taking risks and laboring toward goals are the keys to transforming a dream into a reality.

Bookstore

The fight for the books...

The Bookstore. Fall term. J-term. Spring term. Do these all sound familiar? They should. The bookstore is the place most loved and most hated the first week of the term. It is most loved by the people who are making the money and most hated by everyone else. It begins outside the bookstore at the lists hanging on the walls of the classes. These lists hold invaluable information about which book goes to which class. Once you have found the books you need, the mad rush begins to snatch up the cheapest copy of your particular book before anyone gets it. However, no matter how hopeless it seems, everyone eventually finds the books they are looking for (even if you have to pay an arm and a leg for them). -Nancy Forster

Pay Day finally getting money. . .

Every other Friday the campus is in a scramble to get to the Cashier's office, The beloved office that suddenly becomes too small when there are 20 people waiting in line to get checks cashed. In between classes, any spare second, before 4:00 when the doors close, there are lines to get money. Some checks are as big as $100, some are as small as $15, but to a college student, cash is cash. And that cash has to make it for the next two weeks until the next check comes along. The money is ever-so-wisely used on vending machines, pick-a-dates, phone bills, runs to Wal-Mart, Taco Bell, tanning and more phone bills. Then the sad day comes when a call must be placed to home. You tell your parents how very much they are missed and how you can't wait to come home and see them. Then the big question comes, "Hey mom, I got my phone bill today. Do you think you could possible send me some money?" Then. . .the silence. "How much do you need?" she asks, slowly. It is then that you know your parents really love you.

Admissions

The long, grueling process

It begins sometime your senior year of high school. You start getting bombarded by junk mail from so many schools that you can't even count. Somehow, one application sticks out, TAYLOR. For some reason you start flipping through the catalog and brochure, and decide to apply. Soon enough you are getting calls from the telecounselors asking about your visit to the school. This interview and visit is the most important aspect of the whole application process. While here you tour the campus, the dorms, eat at the DC and have an interview with an admissions staff member. Little do you know that fate is destining you to be on this campus for the next four years of your life. -Nancy Forster

Spring Fever Sun and Classes?

Sun and classes? Do they mix? Not really. Have you ever noticed that the days that the sun is out, there is no one in class? Coincidence? I think not. Spring fever at Taylor is characterized by a few things unique only to Taylor. One would be Ultimate Frisbee. It seems as if, as soon as the sun comes out, so do the boys. They gather on a lawn, half with shirts, half without and play this strange little game called Ultimate Frisbee. Yet another phenomenon is the strange appearance of girls. Ever noticed that as soon as it's sunny the lawn starts being littered with blankets and girls? Spring is a time of love, friendship, games and skipping class. Such as it has been, and will continue to be. -Nancy Forster

Network Help or Hindrance?

For the first time ever, students had access to the Internet, provided by the school, in their rooms. The question all year is whether this was a help or more of a hindrance and a hassle. True, it is very convenient to have access to the Web anytime you want so that all you have to do is turn on your computer, instead of walking all the way over to a lab. However, what about those questionable things that one can find on the Web? Are they too much of a temptation? Is it too hard to get out of our rooms and socialize, and too easy to spend all our time in front of a computer? Many wings, especially in guys dorms, have addressed this problem. They have set accountability partners and have made a wing/floor effort to make sure that they do not spend too much time playing games, or just on the computer in general. The Internet has been a great advantage, however it can be a true downfall. With God and each other, Taylor students are trying to make sure it does not become that.

Caffeine

How do you function without it?

Coffee. Mountain Dew. Dr. Pepper. Cappuccino. Jolt. Whichever container you put it in, they all hold the same substance that has become a vital thing in my life and in those of college students across this land. Caffeine. This wonderful substance that can act as the friend that keeps you up all night. The day before that big test, or that paper is due, we simply call our dear friend Caffeine and he comes running to the rescue. However, there are those few to whom this friend has not simply become just a once in a while friend, but an every day friend. And for these people, life becomes quite miserable without our dear friend. The headaches begin and suddenly, people begin avoiding the once oh-so lovely person they used to know. The person who has suddenly become very cranky and quite a bear to be around is not the person he or she was two hours ago. The reason? That would be lack of meeting the addiction and desire they have for this little substance. Personally, I am hooked. Coffee is my favorite I have to admit, but lately Mountain Dew has been more convenient (you know, the vending machines on every corner in every building). But, for those all-nighters, a big pot of coffee goes on and is finished in about two hours. Oh well, what can I say? I'm a college student.

Regrettably the picture of the music department was misplaced. We offer our deepest and most sincere apology to the professors in this department. The professors of the Music Department include: Dana Collins, Dr. Barbara Dickey, Dr. Leon Harshenin, Dr. Albert Harrison, Dr. Richard Parker, Dr. JoAnn Rediger, Dr. Frederick Schulze, Dr. Patricia Robertson.

The art majors work all year to create their masterpieces. All of their heart, soul and mind go into perfecting five or six paintings or drawings that they display to the school, parents, relatives and friends. Everything they have learned and studied and hoped for and dreamed for comes to a climax their senior year. All of the hard work, the long hours, the mistakes, the late nights, everything they have put into their paintings is displayed for a few weeks in the hallways of various buildings around campus. The display starts out with an "open house," where parents, family and friends can come and enjoy the artistry and have refreshments and fellowship. After that night is over, the paintings hang on the wall for two weeks or more and the "comments" book slowly fills up. A variety of art is seen on this wall. Anything from still, inanimate objects, to photographs, to people and faces and fictional scenes. Some are touching, some inspirational, but all are a display of talent that few have and even fewer pursue. -Nancy Forster

The Library Place for research or socializing?

The library. That absolutely lovely place to which we all love to go. Some students spend all of their study time in either the library or the "geek room," while some avoid the place unless all other alternate routes have been exhausted. However, it is sometimes necessary to find somewhere quiet to work on those silly papers that professors make us do (professors? papers? you mean we have to go class?). The library can, contrary to popular belief, be a relaxing place and a place to actually accomplish something. We all know how hard it is to get anything done in our dorm rooms, and that is why this great place comes in handy. When your roommate is playing Metallica at full blast and people will not leave you alone, despite the number of signs you put up requesting silence, there is a place of refuge. A place to find shelter from the storm. The library. Or the geek room, either one. Some cannot work in complete silence, so they head to the library. Others cannot work in anything but complete silence, so they head to the geek room. The library is also a pretty handy place to check e-mail on your way to a meeting or to class, or just to kill that half hour between lunch and your next class. It also has one other use that may seem absurd. Books. The library is full of books. Books for research, books for pleasure, books for reference. Granted, some of them have a tendency to be a little bit on the old side. But, there are many useful books that could be handy in finishing up that paper or just for a little pleasure reading.

Secretaries

The ones that do it all

You see them behind desks, running copies, on the phone, writing out letters, answering questions and basically doing everything. These women literally hold this school together. They know everything there is to know about their departments and making sure everything is kept sane and in order. I know for a fact that if any one of these ladies were gone for one day, the whole department would fall to pieces in that short 24 hours. How do they do it? Well, my bet is most of them are mothers or were at some point, and we all know that mothers can do anything. So in a sense they are our mothers while we are here at school. They know what needs to be done and how to accomplish it in the short time it needs to be done. So, next time you see one... be sure to say thank you. They have helped you in some way, whether you realize it or not.

As quoted from The Gem, "Flames escort Taylor's historic landmark into the past." This tragic fire made a way for the new building to be constructed.

The Gem stated in 1969 that, "The dedication of the science building is concrete evidence of the growing program at Taylor." This still holds true today.

Bulletin Boards and posters. Signs and lamination. Who could ask for anything more? As far as the education majors are concerned, the ETC is like heaven on earth. Actually it depends on who you talk to and what project they are working on. However, the ETC is not only used by education majors. For Youth Conference, discussion group leaders used the back room for painting their signs and making it exciting for the highschoolers. The PA's also use the ETC and the back painting room for wing or floor decorations. Anytime during the spring or summer, PA's can be found there using their creativity and making fun things for the up-coming year. So, next time you have a project, the ETC is the place to find all the art supplies one could need.

(1996-1999)*

When G. Roselyn ("Rosie") Kerlin ('55) was elected to serve as Chairman of the Taylor University Board of Trustees in 1996, her election was the end of an era. Though Taylor University was started in 1846 as Fort Wayne Female College, one-hundred-fifty years later, at the time of Taylor Sesquicentennial, there were four women on the twenty-six member Taylor Board, an all time high, and there had never been a female elected to serve as chairman. Having been a member of the board for twelve years, Mrs. Kerlin, a former teacher, had served four years as Chairman of the T.U. Academic Affairs Committee, and had been secretary of the board. She was Vice-Chairman of the Taylor Board when elected to be chairman. Taylor Board bylaws all three consecutive years for the board of her third year as chair-board chairman had

Reflections

As you read this reflection, let it be just that, a reflection of where you have been and where you are going. If we allow ourselves to think about each one of these questions, this could be the best reflection we could ever imagine.

What was it like when your parents dropped you off on the first day? What was your first DC experience like? Who was the first person you met at Taylor? Who was in your PROBE group? What class brought a smile to your face because you finally saw $18,000.00/year paying off? Who did you kiss in your years at Taylor? How did you find a church to go to in the community? How did Thanksgiving Break '95 feel when you got home? How many roommates have you had? When did God speak to you here at Taylor? How many pick-a-dates did you go on? Who sent you a note that brightened your day? How many times did you see the men of Morris run around in their underwear? Who was a professor that gave you a gem of wisdom? How many hours did you skip in your time at Taylor? When was the first theological discussion you had at Taylor? How many times did you hear the words "Kiss of Peace?" How many times did you forget your ID at the DC? Over what issues did you question Taylor administration? How many people will remember your impact? How many people impacted you? How did it feel to come in as a senior, knowing life was soon upon you? Did you love someone at Taylor? Did you tell him or her? Did you ever forget to groom properly? Have you ever screamed, "I hate Taylor University?" Have you really experienced the goodness and ignited a fire of love for Jesus Christ?

My fellow classmates and friends, these are your four years. I thank each of you who helped me, loved me, fought with me, ran with me, laughed with me, cried with me, prayed with me, talked about me, disagreed with me, studied with me and grew in Christ with me. Taylor University and Class of 1999, I love you and will cherish all you have given me.

Rebecca Welscher looks longingly out the window, hoping to survive the near-death experience of giving blood.

Look Up

...I was hospitalized with a bleeding ulcer. At 23, that came as a big surprise. I lost 60% of my blood because of the sucker. Hospital. Blood transfusion. Blood tests. More blood transfusions. ICU (Intensive Care Unit) overnight. More tests the next day. More blood transfusions. The rest is history.

As I reflect on the events I can't help but find the spiritual link in it. I had no pain. Things happened quickly. I just "happened" to be home for the weekend. It was spiritual because I saw God in the people who were around me. My American parents, the doctors, the nurses, the secretaries, all of them were showing me God through their care.

I can't help but praise God as He orchestrated the events--maybe to tell me to focus more on Him, maybe to strengthen me, maybe to show me I'm nothing without Him, maybe, probably all of the above.

As a senior, I have a renewed interest and excitement about graduation. The idea of coming so close to death certainly puts life into perspective. What's important and what's not is clearer now. And serving God with all my heart, with all my mind, and all my soul will be what I will do.

Lessons

"A lesson learned, a loving God and things in their own time. In nothing more do I trust. We owe nothing, nothing is ours, not even love so fierce it burns like baby stars. But this poverty is our greatest gift. The weightlessness of us as things around begin to shift."-Indigo Girls, Everything In Its Own Time

My final months at Taylor have brought a flood of emotion that often seems to be entirely beyond the expression of mere words...but occasionally my hopeless thirst to express all that I am feeling is quenched, when I stumble upon the poignant poetry that reminds me I am not the first nor the last to be in this place. It is a place torn between reflection and anticipation, trust and fear, nostalgia and hope, comfort and the great unknown.

The years we've spent at Taylor are priceless treasures to which we cannot cling, and it is possibly the wordless moments that teach us that the most. It is then that we realize that the end of our education is but the beginning of our learning...and that our current poverty is perhaps a mere glimpse of all we have yet to see.

Sunset

It's early morning. The sun is rising. As it does, it casts an amazing array of colors throughout the sky. I sit in awe of its beauty and wonder what the sunset will look like. You can never tell how a day will end by how it begins. In the same way, I could never have imagined how my time at Taylor would end by how it began.

As I look back there are two things that I could always count on to see me through: friendship and the Bell Tower. From roommates to fellow PA's to Professors to the student development staff, I have been richly blessed in the number of people who are willing to love me, to rebuke me and to hold me accountable.

How amazing it is to come to a place where the professors not only teach but cry with you. A place where they welcome you into their homes as part of the family. A place where every 15 minutes there is a great chime of the Bell Tower, a sound that reminded you that faith and learning are not to be separated, and a sound that told of God's constant love and presence.

As I wonder what my sunset will look like, I also ponder what will serve as my Bell Tower when I am away from Taylor University, and what colors I have added to this campus.

Swallow Men

Swallow life is simple, yet unique. We need only three things to survive: Simpson's, bowling, and a whole lotta' Swallow Lovin'. This year will always be marked for us by the proposal to change Swallow from a coed dorm to a girls' dorm. We did everything possible to keep the "nest" from changing: we wore our "Old School" shirts from Thanksgiving to Christmas, we signed petitions, we wrote letters, we met with the housing director, and we even went to Jay. The greatest thing we did, however, was to give it to God as we met in the lounge and prayed over the dorm and its future the night before the big meeting was held. No matter what happens, we will always remember the people, the fun, the late nights, the weekend trips, Beth "The Donut Lady," roller blading during warm fall nights, waking up Steve and Deb numerous times as we became rowdy playing card games, floor stomps for our sisters, fumbles, hall retreats, Swallow Church, J-term Prayer and Praises, watching "The Simpsons" after dinner, going bowling every Wednesday night, and just plain hanging out. -BM

Stained orange carpet, First East BEASTS, Lynn timer, Jorje, Tiny Tim, Myers-Briggs. There are so many memories and stories behind each face, each of which adds to the diversity of 1EO. Our many different backgrounds, personalities, interests and perspectives on life show how each one of our sisters are amazingly unique. But even through our differences, smiles, laughter, and hugs are contagious over here. God has blessed this wing incredibly by bringing us together through the common bond of His love - love that will stay with us wherever we go, even as far as Spain, Lithuania, Russia, Israel, Kenya. First West Olson

I became a part of First West Olson before I knew we were formerly known as "the black hole." In all honesty, I panicked (and who wouldn't?). My only thoughts were, "Black hole? That can't be good." But then we spent a weekend on a lake committing our year to vulnerability, honesty and sisterhood in our Heavenly Father. The good (and bad) times began to shine...shaving cream fights, taping the bathroom door shut and crawling through the hole, pick-a-dates from hell, pick-a-date screening, a live nativity scene, R.B.'s "Carmen Sandiego" and "man on the hall," growing leg hair, Hawaiian beauties, our single football win, sledding on DC trays, trash heaps: rooms 116 and 105, and our honorary wing member and friend Traci Tiberi! Finally, special thanks to the following for making this year unforgettable: T.A.B., Ned Flanders, Aretha, Brenda's crush (C.H.), our nonexistent bro wing, Billy Madison, "wanna get some food?," and for our time spent kneeboarding with Robbie Stewart's dad. "TTFN ladies!" - Krista Kier

Dear 2EO, Many new freshmen and new faces appeared on the wing this year. We've had a lot of fun together, "the great awakening" for freshmen and most of Olson and Wengatz, 80's crazy bowling, wing retreat, duckpin bowling, dinners on the wing, Christmas with Jay, Christmas morning (early) and much more. Both Kimberly and I have enjoyed getting to know each one of you. You all have made an impact in our lives. We are excited to see what God has planned for next year; it will be amazing. This year we wanted to be unified and we believe that you all have helped us to be more unified. Thanks for all of your encouraging faces and notes and smiles. We love you very much! There is a time for everything, and a season for every activity under Third East Olson:

A time to be silly and a time to cry; a time to build new friendships and a time to keep the old ones; a time to challenge and a time to support; a time to take out your Odyssey and a time to pray; a time to scream for no reason at all and a time to study; a time to borrow clothes and a time to bare it all; a time to put out Hershey Kisses and a time to hang with the girls; a time to keep secrets and a time to share; a time to sit in K, L, M and a time to sit in the upper left side of the DC; a time to Fall Rendezvous and a time to go to Lisa's; a time to miss Tiff and a time to miss Leslie; a time to go overseas and a time to go across campus; a time to hang out with our brother floor Sammy II & hellip-oh wait, no; a time to go Matthews and a time to go to Cracker Barrel; a time to keep traditions and a time to build new ones. First North English

On the English Hall road trip, one of the stops is Harbor Springs, Michigan. Although even we First-Northerners are not sure exactly where that is, we are certain of one thing: we know how to laugh and live it up! Who else goes sledding in laundry baskets or hosts parties in the bathroom? Who else loves to worship God "Jump, Jive an Wailin'?" And who loves broccoli and speaking our second language, "Russian-Tchinese" more than we do? We certainly have the best Tuesday night study breaks and the most fun attempting to serenade the Brotherhood. But perhaps our most treasured characteristics are our ability to sunbathe in a suite and convince Rick Muthiah to be Santa at our Christmas open house.

Despite our lack of geographical knowledge of Michigan, we First-Northerners have created an identity all our own and thank God for the blessing of dear friends.

First South English

To the Beautiful Women of First South,

For the past four years we've lived on First South and we'd just like to thank all of you for making our last year one of the best. It has been a joy hearing the sounds of barking MadDawgs, loud music and contagious laughter. The smell of ramen noodles and popcorn will always trigger warm memories.

The sights of scattered magazines, full moons, and Kathie Lee will forever be ingrained on our minds. Never forget the long-awaited ring down, and always remember to "FIGHT NAKED."

Thank you all so much for your patience, love, prayer, support, and most importantly your friendship. We will treasure these memories always and we wish you the best.

And Kent, her roommate, the cheerleader.
Miss Maple is our math major,
And Rachel laughs in the face of danger.

While Amanda's smile shines like the sun.
Jill is quiet, but loves to drive fast,
Everyone wants Faith's massages to last.
Nikki and Nell love the boys,
While Betsy and Molly make little noise.
There is Tamara, who is always in a craze,
While ER puts Sarah in a daze.
Peak and Brittany are our basketball stars,
While Deanna and Chewbacca will go far.

Leandra seems to always be happy,
While Stacey and Laura are kind of sappy.
We have Nikki who knows how to farm,
And Kim, our DC, keeps us from harm.

"I'd like to call up, once again, 2nd Center English," was our main theme this year with an incredible six ring downs. Many memories were created as we traveled to Indy for Christmas, carved pumpkins on a farm, experienced Fred and Wilma on our bowling pick-a-date, and successfully made Bruno our "Latin King" for Airband. With many of 2nd Center moving off next year, it won't ever be the same. Nonetheless, as sisters in Christ, God has burned these memories into our hearts. And who knows, when we meet again in His Kingdom, and are standing around in His light, He just might say, "I'd like to call up, once again, 2nd Center English."

What does it mean to be a part of 3NE? Living among 24 of the most amazing women on campus. Lots of hugs and backrubs. Being a "player" on the football team. To "Keep on Dancing" with the Brady Bunch. Having the awesome men of Second East for a brother wing, bowling bets, and the secret turkey gift exchange. Small groups, prayer partners and spiritual growth. Morning meditation with Marge. Challenging each other as sisters in the Lord. The 80's Jr. High Sleepover, birthday parties, and Broomball. Sara singing in the shower and everywhere else. Prayer and praise in the Health Center followed by wing flu shots. Shank and Kelly's pranks. The Christmas pick-a-date, mall security and fun at Rose's. Freezing in English and curling our hair to get warm. The Block Party pick-a-date and coming to see what "man of God" really means. Joining together in prayer for Jaime's surgery and recovery. Twenty-four-hour prayer vigils and nightly prayer. Coming to see what really matters. Accountability. Growth. Friendships that will last forever. Seeing God's faithfulness and grace. Seeking to become set apart in our love for Christ and for each other. Learning what it truly means to be blessed and knowing that "this is just the start of a beautiful friendship."

Third Center English

Though a center wing is the most spread out wing in English, 3rd Center transcended the seeming miles of hallway between our suites to truly bond. Made up of perhaps the most diverse majors at TU - we've got English majors, Biology majors, Chemistry majors, Bible majors, Art majors, Music majors, Spanish majors, Christian Ed majors, heck, we even have a licensed hairdresser! - we gelled our personalities into an awesome wing. Sweet times have been spent with the quality women of 3rd Center and even after we've gone many different ways next year, we will once again transcend the space between us, remaining great friends and sisters. -Samantha Schley

So many girls in one great place, Each with such a beautiful face. We all love Nelson a whole lot, for fashion tips...just ask Pott; Becky is quite the artist, while Joni has never been kissed; Charissa has, we all know that, so, what are you saying, Pumpkin is fat? "It's all fun and games," Amber said, and soon Krystal will be wed; Kristin's time for Ramen is midnight, watching Steph play volleyball is a delight; Alison's man moved to Upland for her, and there's nothing quite like Karin's tour; Megan knows every guy on campus, and having Kacsur's care around is a plus; the cutest thing is Emily and sweet boy, while Kiki's smile we all enjoy; Karen is quite the soccer buff, while Emily F. is so stinkin' tough; the sweet thing from Mexico is Boss Hog, someday I hope Shelley's hubby eats a corn dog; Amanda is our own little Puerto Rican, and Virginia came back from J-term with a tan; Kim Baker is a cutie from head to toe, while Becca has a deep love for Mexico; a hospital trip for Kaitlyn and a broken bone, and Mindy's softball talent is widely known; Sarah W.'s great smile you can't ignore, and we're so glad we got Aly from 2nd floor; and I'll tell you one more thing, Rachel is an honorary member of our wing; so many wonderful things each girl brings to just a great wing; and to each other we will cling. So for one last time we will be the 1998-99 3SE!

Third Gerig

I'm about to finish my third and final year as what my friend Joel deemed a "Triple-G," long ago. I have to say life here on the "G-side" just keeps getting better and better. From the moment our 14 explosive freshman sunk their spoons into that carton of Breyer's mint chocolate chip, I knew that this year was going to be amazing. I had no idea. I remember seventeen upperclassmen parading our freshman down to the prayer deck that first week, kneeling at their feet, only to have our towels taken from us and to find them at our feet. We've been serving each other ever since. Canoe trips and hay rides, Christmas parties and SNL cheers, line dancing at midnight in the YWCA gym and Fazoli's dinners. SDP's and "study breaks." We've laughed and cried our ways through it all together. These 32 women from all over the world (Alaska, Hawaii, California, Florida, England, Hungary, Turkey, Brazil, Paraguay, Colorado, and everywhere else in between) have come together in a way that only sisters in Christ can. 3G...Taylor's best kept secret.

Fourth Gerig

This year has been a great year for FOSO (Fourth Gerig). Since we had a lot of upperclassmen voluntarily remain on the floor this year, the floor unity was incredible. There is a small number of freshmen, so we s--eniors had an easy time of making them welcome and getting them caught up on floor traditions and legends. FOSO had its 2nd annual 100-foot slip-n-slide (the only good reason for the hill behind Gerig). We retreated into the woods in McHenry, IL, and learned Justin's fixation for fire. There were also cool pick-a-dates, including the annual Circus date, and many deep conversations about life and love, although probably more about love. I've spent all four years up on Fourth Gerig, and it's a wonderful place. Thanks to Lori Bedi and all the guys who through the years have given me advice and put up with me. May 6:30 PM on Fox always hold a special place in our hearts and may James never choke on his food during 3-minute meals. -Josh Hawn

First East Wengatz

So I'm kneeling down on a stage. It's very dark, and it's also a little drafty (because I'm wearing a dress). I wonder, in this moment, why I'm wearing a mini-skirt and about to dance in front of the whole school. I look around me and see 30 other guys also crouched down, wearing dresses, about to perform "It's a Hard Knock Life." There's safety in numbers, and that's what makes 1st East different from any other wing. But it's more than dancing around like fairies. It's Eastapalooza, the Fat Man Bounce, Register Ball, sitting together in chapel, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. It's fellowship. It's trust. It's love. So I'm kneeling on a stage. It's very dark and drafty, and I'm wearing a dress. And I look around and see 30 other guys doing the same thing. Guys I've played football and soap soccer with, who've touched my heart in ways that can't be fully described. And I'm joyful. It's all about love on First East. -Josh Maggard

Some people think Phurst West is a place where the lights never go off and someone is always up until the wee hours of the night looking for a good time...That's not really true. Some may picture Phurst West as the epitome of etiquette and finery, exuding nobility and class with just a dash of rogueish disregard...More or less that's inaccurate. Others envision Phurst West as a wing full of savvy, motivated scholars and athletes looking to excel past the common boundaries of man's exploits into a new and glorious future...That's not quite right either. Still others think of us as suave Casanovas making women swoon and then sweeping them off their feet...That would be false. Basically we think of ourselves as a bunch of guys looking for women. -Kirk Robinson

Third East Wengatz

Words to live by. "...I am not educated, but I do read books....Here is [a quote] I found as I was reading...this quote is about a young man....He had married a beautiful girl, and they had a lovely daughter, and then suddenly she died, and this is what he wrote....'She was beautiful in face and form and lovelier still in spirit. As a flower she grew and as a fair young flower she died....None ever knew her who did not love and revere her....When she had just become a mother...by a strange and terrible fate death came to her. And when [she] died, the light went from my life forever.' he thought the light had gone from his life forever-but he went on....And as I leave, let me say, that is an example I think all of us should remember. We think sometimes when things happen that don't go the right way...that all is ended. Not true. It is only a beginning...because the greatness comes not when things go always good for you, but...only if you have been in the deepest valley, can you ever know how magnificent it is to be on the highest mountain."

Third West Wengatz

Third West. What is there to say? A reformed wing or the same old thing? How about both? Holding firm to our legendary past, but with a vision for the future. What is it? Only God and those He has revealed it to, know. Sure, we have our share of rough edges, but what do you expect from a wing like no other? With 37 unique guys, we have much to offer: football brutes, baseball studs, cowboys, pranks, trucks, bigger trucks, boxer chapel, the best showers, facial hair, muscles, guitars, men chiseled out of granite, the jackalope - a testimony to our great open houses, Third West Files, and "boots and chaps and cowboy hats." What more would you expect from 16 seniors investing in the future of Third West? To all who doubt, we say loud and clear -

Ahhhh yes. Another year is drawing to a close and Sigma Beta is once more surrounded with the core of the manly men. Amongst these men are those who have to leave...not like you have to twist their arms. But our good comrades in arms Fisher, Egg, Locker, Beav and Rylan are ready to fly the coop, and with a rather successful year of um..oh runs to Burger King and Little Caesars, Sigma Beta Fest, the second annual Ribs-n-wrestling(TM) and the incredible fixation to the superb bowling at Crest Lanes....This not to mention the slew of pick-a-dates and the lucrative Floor banquet that is still to come. Third Bergwall

Behind the door leading to Third Berg lies a world unknown to many. A long stretch of hallway where 48 girls with 48 unique personalities live together, work together and play together. A place where on any given night you will find people playing Euchre in the "quad", Chris talking on the phone for hours outside her door, the six soon-to-be-married girls discussing wedding plans and looking through bridal magazines, a group in the study lounge with books in hand, girls walking around half-dressed looking for clothes to borrow, and people yelling and running up and down the hall. Many of us are as different as night and day. But I believe we have all come to appreciate each other for who we are as people and as sister's in Christ. And I know that if I needed to talk, no matter which of the 21 rooms I chose to go to, there would always be a listening ear and an open door waiting for me.

Foundation

Though the discrepancies of haste were seen in the building of our new home, our relaxed demeanor allows us to accept it as our new stead.

For Foundation, in our virgin year, we find that 180 dollars is way too much to pay for a watch. Mitchell, we miss having Roger Jenkinson on the floor. Three times a lady, we find ourselves inundated with wome... oh wait, this is Foundation. We're too lazy to get off the couch, plain and simple, unless Ultimate beckons. So to close, yeah dogg, the shower shorts live on.

Who knew 11 A.M. could be the time for both awakening and entering sweet slumber? Flags of countries conquered in the hallway? "Like Bruce, I wanna be, I wanna be?" Video game commentary in foreign tongues spilling into the halls? The stage? Copious amounts of folk music at any and all hours? FIFA lounge? Dire Straits at ear-shattering volume in the shower? The Competition? Where else could you be but South Foundation?

From first-year freshman to four-year Morris men, to guys that never leave college, we are the men of South Foundation - diverse, small but mighty, we stand together. The Bruce, Cuz, Jax, T-Rex, Anvil, Chaddy, Pickle, The Spaniard, Perry, Max, Squatty, The Pilgrim, Mayes, Vic, and of course (the elusive and adopted) Welty - we all sing, "Viva la FIFA!"

Sammy II

Another year has passed on Sammy II, and a lot of things have changed. Losing the group showers was rough, but I think we all agree that the hot tub made up for it. We have about twice as many guys, but at least there are the same number of toilets. And the serious lack of drywall has made time capsules all but impossible. Despite all the changes this year, Sammy II has managed to retain what has made it a great place to live: unity mixed with a good dose of apathy. Sure, you can count on getting fumbled when you get caught wearing your ID in your hat. The happy-fun game will always mean an unsuspecting freshman in the fountain. And don't even think you can get away with an "innocent back rub" in the Morris lounge. Oh yes, the bunny will find out.

So now that the transition has been made, life on Sammy II will continue as normal. Whatever that is. New freshmen will arrive, stories about the graduated seniors will be told, and, in an ironic twist, the bitter juniors will move on to be the floor leaders. So even after the northern section crumbles to the ground in about 10 years, Sammy II will still be around. Only slightly better than jail, but we will always be around.

Off-Campus

It's not easy to summarize what living off campus is like. For some of us, it means dealing with loud neighbors who live above, below or beside us. It means being driven to banging on the ceilings or walls to shut people up. Or it means having your parking space, although specifically designated for your use, taken by an inconsiderate neighbor or neighbor's visitor.

For others, it means being the inconsiderate neighbor. Although those of us who live in houses may try to peaceably integrate into our neighborhoods, sometimes our meanings of peace don't equate with those of the town residents.

But whether we live in a house, an apartment or maybe even a trailer, I don't know, all of us share one bond -- getting to experience a sense of freedom and independence with the very people who keep us from behaving maturly. We have fun with only self-discretion to monitor our quiet hours and open house policies (while abiding by the LTC, of course).

We get to grasp a little bit of the real world, while still somewhat attached to the bubble.

So, maybe there wasn't Rice Pilaf back in 1981, but it's obvious that this guy still found sources of amusement.

FuNny gUyS

a touch of humor in the cornfields

Rice Pilaf is more than a mere side dish, more than a revolutionary comedy improv team, and more than a cultural icon in the vibrant, artistic mecca of Upland, IN. Rice Pilaf is a lone source of laughter in the vast comedic wasteland that is the rural midwest. . .and this legacy of laughter continued at Taylor in 1998-99.

The Rice Pilaf Players professional comedy improv team was founded by Taylor senior Dan Buck in the fall of 1997, and has somehow survived two years of sheer hilarity despite being scorned by the yearbook last year (insert bitter expletives here).

During the 1998-99 Pilaf season, Clif Johnson and Mercy Kumar filled the void left by the graduation of Dan Buck, and led The Rice Pilaf Players to groundbreaking new heights such as ripping off bands in the Pilaf TV tour, debuting professionally at ImprovBoston in. . .well. . .Boston, and starring in nationally-televised programming on Who's Line Is It Anyway?

The Rice Pilaf Players are indeed a new Taylor tradition, and it seems odd to look out at the cornfields of Indiana, and think that but a few short semesters ago there was no comedy improv here to grant levity to the darkness that is agricultural community. Fear not. . .Rice Pilaf shall return again.

lending a hand to Upland

Each fall a phenomenon occurs here at Taylor. Hundreds of students find themselves out in the community, helping to do various jobs for the residents of Upland. The Community Plunge was initiated five years ago by the University Relations office to give Taylor's students an opportunity to serve in the surrounding community.

The event, while being spread across the midday hours, also spreads Taylor students across the town of Upland. Students are divided into smaller groups and shuttled to their respective work locations by a number of Taylor vans. For example, this fall a number of students were transported to the Upland Elementary School for landscaping and other cleanup work. Other students lent their hands to Upland's public works department, by painting curbs, fire hydrants and various fixtures throughout the town limits. Many students found humor in the millions of pieces of shredded rubber (from old tires) being layed over the pebbled surface of the children's playground.

The Community Plunge presents a unique opportunity for growth to all that are involved. Taylor's students get a chance to serve in the community in a way that is flexible with their schedules. We are all thankful for the student involvement and hope to see it succeed for years to come.

learning Taylor's way of life

When Taylor's freshmen entered our campus this fall, we welcomed them with water guns, enthusiasm and tons of activities that got them acquainted with each other and college life. Welcome Weekend was a memorable experience filled with crazy games, square dancing, a dedication service, and communion at Taylor Lake, just to name a few. It was during this time that nervousness was pushed aside, more faces were met than names remembered, lifelong friendships began, and those infamous PROBE groups were started.

The theme of PROBE this year was "Exit 59--Taking your life in a new direction." With this, we sought to encourage the freshmen class to not only make a smooth transition into college life, but to get actively involved on Taylor's campus. It was incredible to see the growth that occurred as the freshmen class became secure in their place here, bonded together, and enthusiastic about the things happening at Taylor. I looked forward to every meeting with my PROBE group, and will never forget when we crossed that line of PROBE leader and freshmen to true friends in the Swallow Robin lounge. With our emphasis on community life at Taylor, PROBE was a wonderful way to form relationships and help each other through the beginning of the Taylor Experience.

crazy times in Kansas City

When you put nine students, one professor and five tons of luggage into one "Upland Friends" van for a 10-hour road trip, you're asking for trouble. But that is exactly what we did, when media representatives from both Upland and Ft. Wayne campuses joined together to attend the annual National Media Convention. This year's convention was held in Kansas City, MO, and was filled with numerous learning opportunities in all areas of media.

We all learned quite a bit. . . who everyone had crushes on; ALL about Ben, Megan's boyfriend; how many hairstyling products Michael uses; exactly when the mall attached to the convention opens and closes; there is only one place in all of K.C. to buy hair dye; Dr. Kirkpatrick knows all of the words to "How Bizarre"; you should not be the only guy to sit through a scary movie with five girls who hate them; pink is a great color for a motel; sitting with the professors at dinner has its advantages; you shouldn't open the door to your room wearing nothing but a tiny tank-top, especially when your male prof is on the other side; tripods are necessary for all picture taking; and making friends with random drunk college kids is not the best idea.

Of course, there were a few media-related things we picked up. (Obviously, this yearbook is done!) But more importantly, we learned a lot about each other, and ourselves. The crazy memories and friendships we made will stick much longer than the new techniques taught in some seminar. And one thing is for sure--it is DEFINITELY fun in here!

A fun fact about. . . THE GEM

Yes, it's true. The Ilium was, once upon a time, called The Gem. In the 1959 book, they are quoted as stating, "A Gem is that which is to be prized because of it's worth and value. . . It is our purpose to show the Gem can be your prize because of its future use in recalling memories." We truly hope that you look upon the Ilium with that same sense of pride. -AKM words can't express. . .

Our day really begins at 2p.m. on Thursday--deadline time. Curiously enough, I usually manage to miss that deadline. I guess by now I've gotten used to the sound of my hard-earned money falling into the "Thou Shall Not Steal" box. Ah, the joys of working for The Echo.

The Echo has an unusual chemistry, but one that works--much to the prodding of The Editor and associate editor. The clock reads 5p.m., and by now we're all lost inside our respective pages. A feeling of positive anticipation rests in the minds of all the staff members, as we silently count down the minutes until dinnertime.

Once dinner is over, we return to the lab and resume work. Our conversations are filled with talk of headlines, photos, adds and revisions. Our advisor stops by and checks on our progress.

We look to the clock--11:30. By now, the usual foliage has accumulated (we love fake plants) and the lab becomes a more serene setting. We soon find ourselves heading toward the Jumping Bean--we depend on Ben Eisner and the magic of caffeine to sustain us.

1a.m.--Friday morning has rolled around, and we haven't even noticed. A sort of madness, a kind of insanity begins to set in. Our features editor looks around the room, a gleam in his eye. Conspiring together with the photographer and the sports and graphics editor, an attack is launched. I turn to see a rush of mad journalists, and after a few moments of wrestling on the carpet, The Editor reminds us that playtime is over, and that we have much work to do. Sadly, we return to our seats.

3am--The sports editor has taken his usual place on the couch, while The Editor pours over semi-finished copy. The associate and features editors are feverishly making corrections, and finalizing the layout of their pages. I help when I can, though early mornings at The Echo really belong to my higher ups--they are the ones who make the paper run.

I find my way back to The Editor's office. It's here that we keep "The Bane of The Echo's Sanity," our printer. I eye it carefully, and listen for the sound of the associate editor's voice calling, "Mike, final copy!" Paste-up is the last task of the evening, one which belongs to me. As soon as I've finished pasting and rolling all eight pages, The Echo is ready to go to press. Our job is done. We shut off the lights and head home. Wengatz is dark and silent now. I enter my room, and check the clock--its 4am. I nod my head with approval--yep, it's been a typical night. And the best part is that we get to do it all over again, next Thursday.

reaching out to Marion

ReaLife is an organization dedicated to the inner-city children of the Marion community. Once a week, on a their specified day, Taylor students come together to meet with these children. The majority of them are minorities, who come from broken and abusive homes. Many have become hardened to the cold and despairing world around them. Therefore, the goal of this program is to show God's love to these children in tangible ways; by feeding them, playing games, telling Bible stories and singing worship songs. If we can communicate just a glimpse of who God is to the ReaLife children, we will have come a long way.

The ReaLife ministry began in the early 90's, with a small group of children who met in First Baptist Church. These days, however, attendance is growing. On a normal Tuesday night, there are usually 100-150 kids. When all of these excited, hyper children arrive, the staff calms them down by leading them in praise and worship time. We pray with them, and split them up into their small groups, where they have a 20-minute Bible lesson. Then we have snacks and games, and finish up with prayer.

ReaLife ministry is more than just playing with kids one night a week. It's about changing the way they see the world. At times, ReaLife can be a struggle, but every moment with these precious children is a gift. Our job is to show them Jesus.

muKappa helps MK's feel at home

"By MKs for MKs--A chance to embrace our past while building toward our future."

MuKappa is a student organization designed to function as a support group for missionary kids and children who have grown up overseas (called MK's). The purpose of MuKappa is to aid MKs in their cultural adjustments, to provide an ongoing network of encouragement, fellowship and understanding among its members and to provide the opportunity for others to interact with MKs and develop an awareness of their unique subculture.

Taylor's MuKappa is actually a member of an international organization of similar groups on university campuses. MuKappa International was actually started on Taylor's campus in 1986 by two Taylor students who were missionary kids with TEAM (The Evangelical Alliance Mission), in conjunction with Dale and Bonnie Sloat, a missionary couple from Brazil.

Whenever an MK does something, he/she invariably does it late. That is, unless there is more than one MK working on something, and then it's very late. With this in mind, you can see why it is a wonder that we ever get anything done. There are, however, many events throughout the year.

Annual activities include Cookout with Jay, retreats and nights out for both girls and guys. Traditional activities include Friday and Sunday afternoon soccer, as well as theme evenings at the international souphouse, located on the corner of 2nd and Write streets. Stop by sometime! -John Aoun

A fun fact about. . .

B.S.O.

In 1974, the Black Student Organization was a newly formed club seeking to promote an awareness of the Black culture, and its needs.

The club accumulated its funds through concerts in which the members of the clubs performed musically. The money went towards a scholarship, enabling another student to attend Taylor.

Back in the day, 1925 to be exact, Taylor saw the organization of its first band, with a phenomenal thirteen members.

a SyMphoNy

MUSIC TO OUR EARS

The Taylor University Symphonic Band has been a functioning ensemble within the music department since 1925, when Roy MacMurray served as the first conductor.

Albert Harrison was employed as director of instrumental ensembles in 1978, and has maintained a consistent quality of musical excellence in the Symphonic Band since that time. Under Dr. Harrison's leadership, the band has performed for the Indiana Music Educators Conference, the Christian Instrumental Directors Association and traveled throughout the United States presenting concerts in churches and schools. Over the past several years, numerous students have participated in national honors bands in both Christian and secular formats, representing Taylor University and its ideals.

This year, the band traveled to Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York City. In addition to its educational role as a music department ensemble, the Symphonic Band serves the university as a public relations organization by performing as pep band, as well as in concerts for Homecoming, Parents Weekend, Christmas and Commencement. The musical achievements and attitudes displayed by these students truly exemplifies the ideals of Taylor.

P.A.'s come clean about their dirty work

It's extremely difficult to put into words the job of a Personnel Assistant. But we won't use that as an escape from this "assignment." So, as we were thinking, some words came to mind, that either describe this job or are vital for this particular position. They are: prayer, availability, relationships, flexibility, planning, growth, organizing, vision, servant-leadership, consistency, discipline, meetings, more meetings, and simply loving people. If these ingredients are used faithfully, and in accordance with the Lord's guidance, this job has the capability of changing lives. Realizing the weight of this responsibility is a humbling experience that forces one to continually look to the Lord for help, which is a good thing. Therefore, to be a part of what God is doing in people's lives has certainly been a blessing to us all year long.

LIFE IN '53

In the 1953 issue of the Gem, PA pictures were nowhere to be found. But under the Living section of the book, we found a spread devoted to the married couples living in trailers and apartments on and near campus. Maybe we should take the hint--If we all get married, we won't need PA's anymore!

chorale plants seeds of Christ's love

For the past four and one-half years, I have been a member of the T.U. Chorale. I have had the pleasure of being under the direction of Dr. Kroeker, Dr. Armstrong and, presently, Dr. Rediger. I have also been introduced to a wide variety of music and have traveled the world with this ensemble. We have performed throughout the U.S. and in various European countries. We have been blessed to have the chance to learn about and minister to other cultures.

The goal of the T.U. Chorale, I believe, is to plant the seeds of Christ's love in the hearts of our listeners and whoever else we come in contact with. As the officer over the tour committee, I watched as God directed us to the places we were to go. We began our tour by traveling to southern Indiana and then on to Marietta and Americus, Georgia where we had two fabulous Palm Sunday services. We then traveled to Fort Myers and Clearwater, Florida, where we had the pleasure of performing at the church and school of Jeremy Dys, and at a nursing home and retirement village. After performing in several other churches, we made our way to Greensboro, North Carolina. On Easter Sunday, we were able to share our program with Jason Fletcher's church.

It was wonderful to see Chorale members reaching out to people by sharing what God was doing in their lives. During the trip I watched as God showed me why he had chosen each place for us to perform. Among the best memories of our trip were our times of sharing while traveling. God was good! -Christina Dulworth

we bring well-hidden clubs to light

Have you ever wondered if you are the only one in the world who loves the smell of cottage cheese? Do you feel that nobody understands your passion for kiwi fruit? Well, chances are, you are alone, because those things are just plain weird. Anyway, our job is to find new and interesting clubs to start at Taylor University. Have you ever wondered why every DC worker wears a hat? Sanitation, you may say. Well, you're wrong. It just so happens that the letters T.U.F.S. stand for the TU Farrier Society. That's right. Each one of those people is skilled in the art of shoeing horses. This and many other clubs are alive and kicking on Taylor's campus.

Aside from the clubs that are already established, our team must seek out new and exciting club ideas. Some ideas that we are currently working on are the Bathroom Macaroni Cooking Club, the I've Been to Wyoming Club, and the sure to be popular, I Was Turned Down By Star Search Because I Beat Up Ed McMahon Club. Want something more educational? How about the I Know What's Wrong With Richard Simmons Club, and the Mathematics For Apes and Other Farm Animals Club?

Still don't see anything that tickles your fancy? Try starting your own club. Its easy and fun! Why just last week we started the Bathtub Swimming Club, and membership is already up to 80 students! So don't just sit there, join a club or start your own! Quit reading now. I have nothing more to write. Still reading? Just turn the page.

lacrosse becomes a campus favorite

Taylor was introduced to the exciting sport of lacrosse in the spring of 1999. The support of Taylor students was incredible, as two home games each drew crowds of about 200 spectators. The club proved to be very successful in its inaugural season, going 5-3 on the year. "When Nate and I held a meeting last year, we were excited about the interest expressed, but nobody had really played before," said sophomore co-captain, Chris Hill. The team played four games last year as an unofficial club, and lost all of those games.

The spring of 1999 proved the Trojans to be ready, as they went on to capture five wins, two of which were against cross-town rival Ball State. Co-captains Nate Bates and Chris Hill led the team in scoring, while junior Scott Cahill, along with sophomore newcomer Steve Klipp and freshman Rob Reiter, anchored the defense. Only a handful of goals got past goalie Scott Rustulka. A strong combination of midfielders, including sophomores Chris Anderson, Kyle Martin, Tim Walter and John Fellows, helped push the team to the upper echelon of lacrosse teams in Indiana. Other players who turned out to be great assets to the team included sophomores Tom Roberds and Jason Meade, and freshmen Drew Moser and Nick Runyon.

The team is looking forward to playing many more games next year, as they will be adding the fall season to their schedule. Many students expressed an interest in seeing more lacrosse at Taylor next year. T.U. Lacrosse, 1999, is only the beginning.

THE T-CLUB

In 1972, the T-Club provided an opportunity for men to "put the books aside for a short time and totally involve themselves in physical activity." This program was intended to combine spiritual, academic and emotional aspects of college life with social aspects to create a well-balanced person.

What is the Adventure Club? Well, the Adventure Club is exactly what its name implies--ADVENTURE!!! We started out the year by going caving at Buckner's Cavern in southern Indiana. It was really dark, really wet, and a bit tight in there! Over fall break, about 35 people went to Smoky Mountain National Park to go white water rafting, hiking and camping. Too bad it was about 30 degrees when we got in the water! We also went rock climbing down in Indianapolis at Climb Time.

It was a really fun first year, and with hope, it will continue to be an opportunity for students to experience the outdoors.

A fun fact about. . . "WHEELS"

Over spring break 1975, Wandering Wheels sponsored a trip from T.U. to the northwest coast of Florida. The biking ministry began in 1964, and included trips abroad and weekend excursions all over the U.S. The trips gave Taylor students a chance to tour, exercise, and share their personal faith in Christ with people met along the way.

The Literary Club of 1969 came together to "criticize each other's creative writing, and to sponsor Parnassus."

wRiTE On

sharing a love of writing

The Writer's Club is a group of writers that meet to share their works and receive feedback. It accepts amateur, humble, never-been-published writers with the same enthusiasm (or even more) as it accepts famous, snooty, previously published writers. The Writer's Club meets approximately once a week for about an hour. A typical meeting may include the reading of several poems or a few short stories. The members will then help the author by giving feedback as to what works in the piece, what does not, what is clear and what is unclear. This is done through a friendly atmosphere where a work is thought of as in progress and comments are not made to criticize the author. The Writer's Club recognizes that each author will have his or her own style, theme, genre, sense of appropriate wording, and goals.

In ages past, giants in the Writer's Club history have published The Rhapsodist, an alternative to Parnassus. The Rhapsodist was meant to contain worthy works not accepted into Parnassus due to space, works written by authors after the Parnassus deadline and other excellent prose and poetry.

In summary, The Writer's Club is for everyone who likes to write and wants feedback on their work or stimulation for writing.

Taylor's football program was first established in 1948 by coach Don Odle. This first team, on which eight of the 11 starters had never played football, faced some controversy among Taylor administration and alumni as to whether football was a "Christian" activity. They finished that season with a perfect 0 and 8 record.

TU's first football team, 1948

"We lost so much that first year that we celebrated when we won the coin toss."

—Coach Odle

Relentless Champions

Football

As the Taylor Trojans attempted to build upon the previous year's success, the seniors emphasized being "relentless." Success in football is determined by many factors, but the most important one is the attitude of the players. As coach Wilt always says, "Football is 20% physical and 80% mental." With this in mind, the team strived to be relentless in every aspect of life.

The season started off strong, but a loss to Tiffin made the team even more relentless in its preparation, execution and focus. This reemphasis paid off with impressive victories in the next couple of games. The team found it could play with the best when it lost to the second ranked team in the nation, Tri-State, in the last seconds of the game.

Though the Trojans lost that game, it gave them confidence and determination going into the last games of the season—games that would determine the conference champion. With an exhilarating victory over rival Olivet Nazarene, and wins in two other games, Taylor earned its first conference championship since 1967, and its first ever entry into national playoffs.

For the first round of the playoffs, the Trojans traveled to California to battle Asuza Pacific. This game epitomized Taylor football. Playing in front of many faithful fans, the Trojans made numerous mistakes.

Down 28-7 at the end of the third quarter, down 28-7, Taylor started coming back. With important stops by the defense and some quick scores by the offense, the Trojans came back to tie the game. Even though Asuza won the game with a last second field goal, the Trojans were able to hold their heads high. Each player knew that he had given his all for the glory of God.

Taylor cross country is known for its tradition of winning. Over the years this team has won title after title, and has produced numerous All-American athletes. Since the 70's, TU Men's Cross Country has won 10 national championships and many conference titles. One only needs to glance at the trophy case in the gym to see the long-standing tradition of Taylor Cross Country.

Three year (69, 70, 71) All-American, four year All-conference, and 1969 NAIA National Champion Ralph Foote was inducted into the TU Hall of Fame in 1976.

No Strangers to the Top

Men's Cross Country

Change was a large part of the 1998 edition of the Jarheads (men's cross country). After graduating nearly half the 1997 team this year's group was depending on the large and talented sophomore class to help fulfill the well-known expectations for the cross country program's continued success. In addition to the team's previous talent, Gabriel Rop (NAIA steeplechase national champion) joined our program. With the addition of Kip we knew that, despite our diminished ranks, our team was well positioned to fulfill and exceed expectations. Throughout the fall, long, challenging workouts enhanced summer training efforts. After one specific workout (12 x 1000's on the dike), we all knew we were worthy of our top-five NAIA ranking. By the time we got to the conference meet, we had overcome many racing challenges. Victories at several key invitational events gave us the confidence to win our sixth straight MCC Championship. By handily winning the MCC, we received an automatic bid to the 43rd annual NAIA Championship meet in Kenosha, WI. Led by senior co-captain Owen Cooper, the Jarhead national team was no stranger to big meet competition. Each of the top seven Taylor runners expended their utmost at the National Championship. The team was rewarded for the effort with a third straight top-ten finish. Kip Rop and

Paul Ritchie received All-American honors. The season's efforts paid off. By the end of the 1998 season, our smaller group experienced the camaraderie only cross country running provides. Only through God's blessing and strength were we able to draw together our God-given individual abilities into another winning Taylor cross country season. Thank you, Father, Jarheads (our very best friends), Taylor, and Coach Coy for changing us into the people (Jarheads) we are.

Concentrated Craziness

Women's Cross Country

The Maddawgs do not worry too much about craziness. Coach Bullock says craziness has been an issue with every Taylor women's cross-country team in his 15 years of experience. Coach encourages unity, discipline, stretching, eating foods with iron, loving our families and ignoring the Jarheads. This year Coach's ideals built a hard-working and strong team. In almost every meet this year, a different Maddawg finished in the number one position. However, this was encouraging because it illustrated each team member's ability to give her best. Throughout all the tough meets of the season we encouraged each other to give 100% for God and for coach.

As seniors we feel that this has been the strangest and craziest cross-country season in which we have participated. Many factors have contributed to this strangeness, but we enjoyed them all. The Maddawgs and Coach Bullock have been two of the most meaningful and positive influences in our Taylor experience. Thank you Coach and team for the memories and friendship.

The men's soccer team at Taylor started as a club, but became an official Taylor team in 1983. This first team (coached by Joe Lund as well) made a good showing, proceeding to the second round of both the NCCAA and NAIA championships. They continued to grow, and in 1993, the Taylor men's soccer team won it's first NAIA Championship!

Time Disappointment

Men's Soccer

After coming off a successful season in 1997, the Taylor soccer team was looking to repeat as conference champs. Unfortunately, that was not to be. Battling perhaps the toughest schedule in their history, the Trojan men never managed to get fully up and running. Their rigorous schedule, consisted of five home games, and several overnight trips to New York and Ohio. This took it's toll on the men. They left them with a disappointing 10-10 record and a season finishing loss to Wesleyan in the semi-final of the conference tournament. Despite the ending, the Trojans were able to place five players on the Mountain Conference Team: Chad Dale, Stuart Davis, Ryan Eernisse, Bryan Flora, and Dan Rhodes. Eernisse was also named as an Honorable Mention All-American. With many returning underclassmen, however, the team is looking toward a promising season for 1999.

Driving Toward the Goal

Women's Soccer

The Taylor women's soccer team had a great season. They started off slow, with two wins and three losses the first five games. Hard work and determination led the ladies to a seven-game winning streak, with all but one of those being shut-outs. In fact, with the exception of Spaulding, who only got past the Trojan defense once to score, all of the team's wins this season were shut-outs. With only two more losses all season the women ended with an impressive 10-5 record.

The lady Trojans were also proud to have two of their teammates, Jessica Green and Debbie Douglass, selected to be on the 1998 Mid-Central Conference All Conference team. -Sarah Willhoite

The Taylor Men's tennis team (formerly called the "Netters"), was a powerhouse in the conference during the late 60s and early 70s. From 1966 to 1977 the team won 12 straight conference championships!

Hopeful Success

Men's Tennis

The 1998 men's tennis season began with high expectations after a disappointing second place finish the previous year. The team wasted no time in setting its goal of duplicating the 1996 tennis season's success: a season which gave the men's tennis program its first conference crown and national tournament birth in over a decade. As the season progressed, it became apparent that Taylor was one of the favorites for the conference championship. With the loss of only one varsity starter, and the addition of several talented freshmen, team members knew that they would have a chance for the title. However, the season ended with a repeat second place finish at conference. While not winning the championship was disappointing, the season was still a success in the minds of its players and coaches.

One of the reasons for the team's success was the commitment demonstrated by each member. On the court, team members could be counted on to push each other during practice and to support the other players at the matches when the going got tough. The success of the 1998 team was also linked to Head Coach Don Taylor and Assistant Coach Shawn Flanary. Their leadership and coaching enabled the team to improve physically, mentally and spiritually. This tennis season also produced many memories on and off the court. Cards in the van, grueling practices in the heat, challenging initiatives, the girls tennis team and the Kentucky trip marked some of the highlights of the season. The tennis team is still young, and with experience the men's tennis team will be back in the spotlight in the future.

Timeless Memories

Women's Tennis

Four returning players. Four new players. One exceptional coach. We knew that our competition would be tough this year, and that we would be challenged to play our best in all our matches. After placing fourth during conference play, we were determined to place higher at the conference tournament in Indianapolis. With Natalie Cook placing 1st at 4th singles, Sara Webb and Carrie Johnson placing 2nd at 1st doubles, and Emily Tipton and Cook placing 2nd at 2nd doubles, we tied for second place. Webb was also honored with the prestigious All-Conference player award.

What happened on the court, however, will not live in our memories as long as what happened off. Devotions, fun with the guys team, the Econo Lodge, long talks in the van and, "I think you ate my socks!" How could we forget the practice we spent taking pictures of coach and his sporty car? And whatever happened to those four dozen Krispy Kreme doughnuts? These are the memories that will not be forgotten.

Tennis doesn't bring in flocks of fans or big headlines. We play the game for our teammates, for our school, and for our Lord. We play the game because we love it.

The first golf team was established at Taylor in 1948. This team, consisting of only four members, was known as the "Turf-diggers." Since then Taylor's Golf team has thrived. In the late sixties and early seventies the team was coached by Don Odle.

Maintaining Momentum

Golf

Taylor's golf team rode a wave of momentum coming into the 1999 season. After participating in the 1998 National Tournament, and having a strong fall season, the men were ready to follow up those past accomplishments with an equally successful spring season.

For the second year in row, the team had three seniors who were selected to the MCCAA conference team. Seniors Ben Metzger and Dwayne Safer, along with junior Jeff Hager, were named to the team. This was a huge honor for the team to make the team for the second year. Hager has been a part of the team for three years.

Junior Wes Kent made important contributions to this year's team, and will be back to help lead next year's squad. Seniors Josh Olson and Justin Michels played key roles in leading this team to a second place finish in the conference tournament. He was the lone freshman on this year's team. He saw limited action, but has an enormous amount of potential for the future.

Winning the Manchester Invitational was a great start into spring season. The team worked hard to maintain their level of play, and it continued throughout the season. They ended the conference play with a second place finish and a record of 38-1. They carried that play into the conference tournament, and successfully moved on to nationals for the second straight year. This team's hard work and desire has again set a precedent for the future teams to emulate. -Ben Metzger

Get on Top

Volleyball

The joy of the Lord will be my strength! I will not falter walking by faith. He is my shelter, I am not afraid! The joy of the Lord is my strength. It was this joy that allowed the 1998 volleyball team to overcome numerous obstacles. As we eagerly awaited the finishing of the gym floor, we headed to the Fort Wayne campus to begin our grueling pre-season. We had a lot of uncertainty, but we accepted these challenges with open arms. Upon finishing pre-camp, we flew our sore bodies to sunny West Palm Beach, Florida. Here we participated in services and sharing God through song with high school kids and the homeless. We also played in a tournament to kick off our season at Palm Beach Atlantic. Back to Indiana! With the slow progress being made on the gym floor we felt homeless, and flexibility became our team word. Again God intervened and allowed us to make the Marion Coliseum our home away from home. We got down to business and pulled our team together. God taught us many things throughout the season. Most importantly, we learned how crucial teamwork is and how to count on each other for support. We also learned to put our faith in God through any adversity. God took us further than we thought we could go, and showed us that if we trust in Him, the sky is the limit.

Trojan basketball has always been a popular sport at Taylor, and throughout history, the Trojans have shown why. With players and coaches like James Bushur, Ted Wright, Forest Jackson, and Don Odle, Taylor basketball has won numerous championships, and boasted many All-American athletes. Trojan basketball has been and will continue to be a huge part of Taylor's rich tradition.

Men's Basketball

The 1998-1999 season was not a season to write home about, at least from a record standpoint. The Trojans calculated a disappointing overall record of 12-18; 4-10 in the conference. However, there was a silver lining on our "dark cloud of a season."

God tested our resilience, our ability to come back, our will to continue working hard, and our faithfulness to Him. We lost seven conference games where we were ahead in the last two minutes of the game, three of those we lost in overtime and one we lost in double overtime. Instead of throwing in the towel, the leaders of the team did not give up, which rubbed off onto the entire team. Practices stayed competitive, players continued to work hard, and God rewarded us with two victories over number one Bethel, and number four Huntington.

Even though we passed God's test of resilience, the Trojans know that His expectations of us surpass a 12-18 record. Be assured that the coaching staff and the players are spending the off-season in search of excellence and more quality.

Carried By Christ

Women's Basketball

The youth movement that entered the 1998-1999 Taylor Lady Trojan's basketball team resulted in predictions for us to finish next to last in the MCC Conference. Despite the overall pre-season ratings, as a team we were determined to make it to the top. From the beginning we set our goals high and let nothing get in the way of our success.

What we didn't expect is that we were going to lose three of our freshmen to season-ending injuries and face many other obstacles along the way. Many times I asked God, "Why is this happening to our team?" He reminded me that sometimes we have to be broken to be made new. Experiencing each of these trials throughout the season only made us stronger for the road ahead. God brought us all together for a reason and my job was to set an example of Christ's love. God is good, all the time!

"We were never meant to make it on our own. When the load becomes too heavy and your feet too tired to walk; I will carry you and we'll be carried on. God will carry us!" Our excellence was never an accident; it was always the result of high intention, determined effort, and skilled execution. -Tara Shellabarger

Cheerful Ministry Cheerleading

1998-99 was an exciting and memorable year for the T.U. cheerleaders. We began the year with high expectations for our season. We started by marching in the Upland Labor Day Parade. Throughout the school year, we cheered for football and both men and women's basketball, and performed routines at Hoopsteria and the Ivanhoe's Classic. Also, through cheerleading clinics for the children of Upland and the cheerleaders at Eastbrook High School, and through our interaction with teams, fans and other squads, we sought to minister by our testimony and example. During our spring break trip to Jamaica, we shared our faith by performing for thousands of school children and other members of the community. We believe God truly used us to touch the lives of those people, and He also ministered to us through the faith of the Jamaican Christians. After returning, we ended our season with a performance to kick off Youth Conference.

This year we saw God work in us, with us, and sometimes even despite us. We were shown many times during the season that, although we should put our best effort in to all we do, it is ultimately God who does the work. Throughout the season, I was often reminded of the promise of Exodus 14:14, "The Lord will fight for you; you need only to be still." -Kelly Mahoney

The Cheerleading squad spent their spring break on a mission trip to Jamaica. It was a memorable, and powerful experience for them all, as well as for those they ministered to. Here they are pictured with thier sponsors Mary and Roger Rayburn.

A Memorable Season

Baseball

Everyone knows that playing a college sport can be pretty demanding on an individual. Just ask the members of the Taylor baseball team. Countless hours were put in on and off the field. Whether it was during Fall Ball, J-term conditioning, long pre-season practices in the fieldhouse, or especially during the season, each player had to dedicate most of his time and energy to becoming a better baseball player. But Taylor baseball is a lot more than just playing the game of baseball. The friendships formed and memories created are something that will be remembered by every player. There were many new faces, but the same old attitude prevailed and the result was a very memorable season.

When thinking about the season so many memories stick out, and here are a few of them: J-Rob (Franchise) hitting 2 bombs on opening day against IU, Palmer's "overrunning" first base, the double-squeeze against IWU, Linny's flawless singing, K.T. and V-Wal's first ever collegiate homeruns, the Amish dinner, Asper's game-winning bomb against Bethel, eating at Juice's house, Coach Winterholter's undying devotion to the field. And who could forget the Daytona Spring Break trip? Playing Miami (OH) on the way down, Sper climbing on the roof of the Georgian Inn, riding the waves, the wonderful lunches from the parents, Coker's "putt-putt", Baskin Robbins runs, Mario's appearance, blonde hair frenzy, 20 foul poles at 85%, the seniors doing the laundry in the ghetto, communion on the beach, and bus driver Ed-enough said.

You may not understand all of these memories, but I guarantee you the baseball players do. All of the hard work put in has definitely reaped many benefits. God blessed us with the ability to play baseball, and we were also blessed by the memories that we will all hold forever. -Ryan "Ace" Miller, Joel "Boo" Martin, Kevin "KT" Taylor, and Steve "V-Wal" Vander Wal

Fulfilled Expectations Softball

Great Expectations! These words sum up the softball team's hopes as they entered the 1999 season. Most of the team was returning, but there were some new faces in the dugout. The Muscles from Brussels, Q, Stan the Man and Niner all stepped up to play roles on the team.

We started the season out slow, but gained momentum so that by Spring Break we were flyin' high in Lake City. The Florida Trip taught us many lessons...you actually have to touch first base for the play to be complete; it doesn't matter how many injuries you have, playing is still possible; to "Say You Can" is to believe; Roger Rabbit is in fact related to Kevin Bacon; and ALWAYS, ALWAYS check the bathroom for bus drivers before you enter (Yikes!).

After the trip we returned home to sporadic Indiana weather, yet our spirits were lifted by extra inning heroics (St. Francis) and the birth of little Elaina Rose. The regular season came to a close and with one swift sweep, we locked up second place in the conference for the first time in Taylor history. A special thanks to B-dog for keeping us laughing: Booom Booom!

The TU men's track team has long been a fierce competitor in the conference with many members setting records and winning regional titles. In 1975, Trojan trackster Gary Friesen set the HBCC high jump record at seven feet wearing only one new shoe.

Rewarding Experience

Men's Track and Field

From hurdles to high jump, steeplechase to mile run, this was an excellent year for the Taylor men's track and field team. The team consisted of 32 dedicated individuals who came together with tremendous force.

Starting out with the Polar Bear meet in March, the Trojan men braved the frigid 30 degree weather and were off to a good start. This momentum carried them all the way to Mid-Central Conference Championship where they topped off the 75 and sunny day with an enthusiastic repeat as conference champs. At this meet, Trojan men broke five M.C.C. records!

This was just one mark of the champion team. They went on to win Christian Nationals for the fifth straight year in a row, and more than 20 athletes made their way to West Palm Beach to represent Taylor at NCAA in May.

Any of the Trojan men would tell you that Coach Coy was a large part of the team's prosperity, as evidenced by his award as NAIA coach of the year.

All around this year has been a victorious one for the men's track and field team and they will all cherish the time and effort that was put in to it. Unique Unity

Women's Track and Field

The Taylor women's track and field team is made up of many different kinds of women. Some enjoy running long miles in the rain, others like to run short and fast distances, some even like to throw objects or run over obstacles. It's through these differences and talents that we formed a team that was unique and special.

This track season was challenging. The team was smaller in number than prior teams, and early in the season we struggled with several injuries. The weather was not cooperating, and the plague of injuries made it very difficult to see future success. This affected our attitudes as well as our performance.

As the season progressed, we realized that we were not performing to the best of our abilities. That is when we asked the question, "Who are we performing for?" We realized that we were not just performing for ourselves, but for each other and, most importantly, for our Lord Jesus Christ. As the team developed unity, we began to run our personal bests for Jesus, who had been in the stands all along.

Through our struggles and obstacles this season we gained friendships, life long lessons, endurance, memories, unity, and, most importantly, spiritual growth.

Stable Excitement

Equestrian

The Taylor University Equestrian team has been competing in the IHSA (Intercollegiate Horse Show Association) shows for 13 years under Coach T.J. LeBlanc of JTL Stables. Both male and female, we share a love for horses and desire to increase our knowledge and riding ability. We strive to glorify God through our riding and to exemplify Jesus Christ in our words, attitudes and hard work.

This year's shows were sponsored by Taylor, Notre Dame, Purdue, Ball State and Saint Mary of the Woods, and 11 different teams participated.

Taylor Equestrians experienced a very exciting year! We added 15 new members to our returning nine, including six members from Taylor Fort Wayne campus. We survived T.J.'s torture lessons ("Jockey Position!"), had a blast at every horse show ("Anyone up for bowling?"), made new friends, and learned a lot.

Over the years, Taylor has always had a strong intramural program. The first intramurals were competitions between the Thalorian, Eulogonian, and Philalethian societies. Taylor intramurals have involved many sports including ping-pong, wrestling, archery, and croquet.

Way to Play

Intramurals

After a year of intramurals and a lifetime of memories, I'm sure we will all reminisce about those close losses, those thinkable upsets. As sure as one reads this article, I will forever tell stories of those fierce off-campus teams who play to win, and intimidate while the glory of the upset or the unlast-second goal, and the triumphant feeling of going to dinner tired and aching but proud. I will tell of camaraderie built among brothers and sisters in Christ and of unity felt within each floor/wing. I might even relay the tempers flared, the dignity upheld and the forgiveness and character-building that was ultimately felt. I will angrily tell of how that referee made that horrible call and how I pushed all homework aside to play a volleyball or basketball game at midnight. Finally, I will tell of the glory of victory and the embrace of the team as the championship shirts were held high and worn proudly for all to see.

Intramurals allow us to compete, to meet new people, and to even dress up as Batman while playing basketball. Their intramural shirts are made and team names are concocted all in the love and tradition of TU intramurals. From the most intense game of basketball to the laughter of softball and the mud-soaked fields of soccer, no one can deny that from the beginning to the end intramurals are relished and anticipated throughout the year. —Was Corbett

As may be expected, Bro-Hogs get a little crazy playing basketball and add a whole new dimension to team spirit.

make history, not to write it.*

So now we've come to the end. The end of the book, and the end of a century full of laughter, tears, love, pain and growth. A time with which God has truly blessed the community of Taylor. From the very beginning in 1846, Taylor has been a great part of God's plan for the world. Why else would anyone put a well-known and respected university in the middle of a small community in rural Indiana? There are reasons, way beyond our comprehension. We ask ourselves why we came out into the middle of nowhere to educate ourselves, and yet the answer is so clear. For the same reasons that the generations before us did. Because Taylor is an amazing place where our minds will be cultivated, and our hearts filled with love for God and His kingdom. Taylor has changed over the past 100 years, and it will continue to do so in the years to come. But no matter the extent of those changes, Taylor's love for God and desire to seek His will shall remain constant. And, as with every ending, there is a beginning. For Taylor, the new century will bring many opportunities for more laughter, tears, love, pain and growth.

Well, here we are. The end of the book. It's been one LONG, CRAZY year. We came in as two new students and took on a job that seemed reasonable at the time. AT THE TIME!!!! Now we look back and realize just how stupid we were. But, nevertheless, we made it. This book is now in your hands, and out of ours. Okay, so it wasn't all bad. We like to exaggerate. There are some fun times to remember. The deadline nights that lasted 13 hours or more, Jaimie and her lovemaking to the printer, Sarah's crazy sayings, Lindsay and Drew's countless hours in the darkroom, 3a.m. encounters with Campus Safety, Devon's phone tag relationship with Andrew Draper, bonding (or fighting) with the Echo staff on Thursday nights, and who knows what else. But now we have to say some thank-you's. To our staff-- you guys are great! Without your dedication and talent, we would have never gotten done. To Laurel-- you are an amazing woman. Thank you so much for being our advisor and our friend. We love you! Carol, Sherri and the rest of the Communications Department-- thanks for everything! And to everyone else who put up with us when we were cranky and awful (Elizabeth), thank you so much! Now it's time for us to go catch up on some of the five-billion hours of sleep we lost this semester. God Bless!

Colophon

The 1999 Ilium, Volume 101, was produced by a student staff at Taylor University and published by Herff Jones of Marceline, Missouri. Layouts were created using a PageMaster template for Aldus PageMaker 6.5 software on Macintosh computers.

Photography was processed by Ilium photographers Lindsay Keyes, Drew Valpatic and Sarah Willhoite, Jack's Camera Shop in Muncie, In., Wal-Mart in Marion, In., and CVS Pharmacy in Gas City, In. Other photographs were processed by Jim Garringer, University photographer, or submitted by students and faculty. Additional photographs were scanned from old Taylor yearbooks dating from 1911-1998. Portraits were taken by Jim McAdams of MJM Photography, Greentown, In.

The cover idea was created by the entire Ilium staff. The cover color is 1509 Dark Plum with Grain 00 Crush. Silkscreen color is 16 Pale Gold. Endsheets are CE 03 Natural with 0194 Maroon ink.

The body copy in this volume is Palatino. Headlines are in Vivaldi and Palatino, except in the clubs and organizations section, where sub-headings were done in Freehand591 BT. Also, copy on the Ilium staff page is done in Palooza. All captions are Palatino, and folios are both Palatino and Vivaldi.

The press run for the 1999 Ilium was 1700, and was distributed to students for a fee that was included in their fall tuition. Additional copies are available for $35.00 per copy. All inquiries should be directed to Ilium, 236 W. Reade Ave., Upland, IN 46989-1001, (765)998-5349 or (765)998-5255.

Any negative comments can be directed to The Ilium, X5349.
